Leaks, vapor condensation, and drops of mist can contaminate carbon brushes and their commutators/slip rings. They lead to deterioration or immobilization of the brushes. Dust leads to high brush wear, machine pollution, grooving of commutators/slip rings, and brush side gulling.

How do I choose a carbon brush grade?

It's an important factor in the choice of a carbon brush grade. Water is a critical component of commutator/slip ring films, and is supplied by ambient air. For best performance, a humidity range of 8 to 15 g / m³ (0.008 to 0.015 oz/ft³) of air should exist.

How do I know if my carbon brushes are good?

Be sure to remove the existing film before any carbon brush grade change. Check that the carbon brushes slide freely in their brush-holders without excess clearance. Always check that the carbon brushes were not fitted (or re-fitted) in the wrong direction in the brush-holders.
