By Marija Risteska. Macedonia held presidential and early parliamentary elections in April 2014. Prime Minister Nikola Gruevski of the ruling Internal Macedonian Revolutionary Organization-Democratic Party for Macedonian National Unity (VMRO-DPMNE) won a third consecutive term, while President Gjorge Ivanov--also of VMRO-DPMNE--won his second.

North Macedonia, formerly known as Macedonia, is a parliamentary republic. A left-leaning government has calmed tensions after the 2017 parliamentary crisis that paralyzed normal political activity. In 2019, the government changed the country's name to enable its potential accession to the European Union (EU) and the North Atlantic Treaty ...

Macedonia's elections continue to suffer from several long-term deficiencies. Impartial decision-making by chief electoral authorities remains hindered by the politicized environment, accuracy of the voter registry remains questionable, and election-day practices of voter intimidation and vote buying were reported during the October 2017 local elections.
